

We pick up the story on the Moon's surface in Part One. Jamie, Ben and Polly are fooling around in the low gravity, and Polly takes the opportunity to play some mischievous tricks on her fellow companions. This offends Jamie's masculine pride: 'You're a naughty wee lassie,' he tells her, and Ben nods in agreement.

Polly looks from one to the other. 'Am I?' she says. 'Well, if you can catch me, you can spank me.' And away she bounds, taking huge flying strides across the lunar landscape with Ben and Jamie in hot pursuit. Ben takes the lead, and neither he nor Polly notice as Jamie cannons into a rock face at high speed and knocks himself out. Ben soon catches up with Polly and lays her across his knee... only to find, as he spanks her bottom, that she is giggling uncontrollably. In the low gravity, and across the quilted seat of her pressurized suit, his slaps have no force!

So the story continues on course, with the injured Jamie taken aboard the moonbase and treated in the sick bay. The Doctor waits for a quiet moment alone with Polly before he takes the opportunity to admonish her. It was very irresponsible of her to instigate the chase, he tells her sternly. 'Look what you've done: poor Jamie's concussed!' Since Polly has nothing to say in her defence, the Doctor knows there is only one thing he can do. He sits down and turns her over his lap, then lifts her short black skirt to expose her white, ribbed panties. This is going to be one spanking that she will feel!

Polly's bottom gets very warm very quickly, and she rubs it ruefully after the Doctor lets her up. 'Now, Polly,' says the Doctor. 'I expect you'd like to make yourself useful. So perhaps you'd be kind enough to make us all some coffee...' A chastened Polly yanks down the back of her short skirt and makes her way to the moonbase galley.